on Suspended Sentences. Police Commissioner Waldo outlined some of the problems that the Police Department has to contend with and th they were being worked out, in an addreslast night at the Union Methodist Episcopa ch, in West 48th street, near Broadway He said that he believed in liberal laws and their strict enforcement, rather than striclaws that were not enforced. The latter rule was apparently more in favor to-day

He emphasized his criticism of the crimi nal courts in imposing suspended sentences on prisoners who had been convicted of erime and had former police records. The police made the arrests and obtained a share of convictions, only to see offenders turned out by the courts who should go to prison, he sald.

When the people get ready to demand that the courts hold persons responsible for violations of the law, that will be the end of the violations," he said. "Men who have been convicted three or four times have sentence suspended on them. Out of 4,300 convictions during the last year there were 1,277 suspended sentences. Eighty-one of the 1,277 had actually been convicted of burglary. That is a good many burglars to keep at large in the community. Five and Tuesday and Wednesday in the lower others had been convicted of assault and

The almost physical impossibility of getting evidence in gambling raids which the courts would interpret as good evidence nade the gambling problem appear to be comething else than essentially a poller problem, he said. He deprecated the fact that roulette wheels and other gambling paraphernalia seized in raids was appur ently not considered good evidence of gambling, as the court usually ordered suc property returned to the gambler.
